Cellphone use on aircraft is not only rude and impractical, but also poses serious dangers to individuals. Cellphone conversations will distract individuals from their environment, and may block out important warnings and other emergency issues, not only to the user, but to those around them. Furthermore, the possibility of 'air rage' and passenger violence will be greatly increased by individuals who are angered and annoyed at either the content or excessive volume that is often used in cell phone conversations.

Cell phones on airplanes : Bad Idea.